

MPH Project Certification

Department of Epidemiology and Biostatistics

MPH students in the School of Public Health are required to complete a culminating capstone project experience through which they demonstrate skill and integration of knowledge learned in their program of study. The project is used as a means by which faculty judge whether the student has mastered the body of knowledge and can demonstrate proficiency in the required competencies.

This form is completed by the student and her/his project committee to certify that they have completed the requirements of the capstone project. Students should attach a list of the specific program competencies achieved or enhanced through their project.
